

When it comes to parenting, there's only one...

PARENT GUIDE

Nassau's One & Only

FEBRUARY 2009

Parents and Play Time

The Early Years Institute has launched the Amazing Ways to Play contest for parents and caregivers. Contestants with children ages 10 and younger are asked to submit their favorite "way to play" with their children through a short description and/or photo of a special family playtime activity. Entries should discuss the type of imaginative, creative free play activities that each parent enjoys with his or her next of kin. Activities may not revolve around anything that is electronic, as the goal of the contest is to emphasize innovative ways that families play together without technology. Prizes will be awarded to winners, and an award ceremony will take place in June. Find additional details and submit your entry online before the March 31 deadline at www.earlyyearsinst.org.